

Rules Get Broken deals with love lost, love found, and the collateral damage along the way and demonstrates what love is, and isn't. John falls in love with Peggy Reilly the moment he meets her New Years Eve. Nine years of marriage and two children later, nothing has changed. The beautiful Irish girl with the thick, black shining hair and sparkling, brilliant blue eyes is still the center of his world. But when Peggy tells him one Saturday in July that she can't go sailing because she's too tired to move, John's concerned. When Peggy is diagnosed with acute myelogenous leukemia later that week, he's terrified. And when she dies seventeen days later, he's shattered, his world destroyed. So why then just days after Peggy's death does he call Nancy Charlton, the young woman who once lived next door, and ask her out to dinner? Why does Nancy say yes? And what happens when people ignore the rules of propriety and allow themselves to be drawn into a relationship they know will shock and offend family and friends? What price do they pay for breaking one of society's most time-honored rules of behavior? John Herbert's simple, elemental style, unique insight, and rare sensitivity make Rules Get Broken an unforgettable love story.
